Scholastic India invites you and your students to join schools all across the country on Friday, 25 November 2011 to celebrate the pleasures of reading.

One Nation Reading Together is an annual event, where children in schools across the country will spend 30 minutes (preferably at 12 noon) on the designated day reading for fun, and doing other activities that celebrate reading as a pleasurable and enriching experience.

In 2010, an estimated 850 schools around the country participated in this event. They read the specially written reading pledge and celebrated reading as a pleasurable and enjoyable activity.

In 2011, we are proud to announce that the reading pledge has been written by the award-winning author Ranjit Lal. The participating schools will receive a reading kit comprising the reading pledge, a book specially created for this occasion and posters. Over 6000 schools across the country have been invited to participate in this exciting event.

One Nation Reading Together is also about granting access to books to children who normally do not have access to them.

For every school that participates in the event, Scholastic India will donate 100 books to the library of a needy school.

In 2010 Scholastic had gifted over 85,000 books to children associated with NGOs in different parts of the country. Your participation can ensure that more children have access to books.

There are many ways to celebrate!

Reading is all about fun. Here are some things you can do, but there are many other things that you and your students might like to do!

- Read class-wise or the whole school together.
- Read from the book in the reading kit or any book of your choice.
- Organise short skits or dress up as characters from books.
- Invite an author or a local celebrity to read and celebrate the event with your school.
- Make a bookmark or design a book cover.

We do hope you will participate in this celebration!

Feedback

We would love to hear about your experiences of the event. And so as to share them with everyone, we would like to put up your feedback and photographs on our website.

We would require from you:

- Two good photographs.
- A brief write-up from the principal as feedback.
